course of the Republican majority in the Senate and the course of the Democratic majority in the House in the The Senate. Session just ended, cannot fail to make a profound impression upon the intelligent voters of the country, says The New York Press. The difference in every respect is strikingly in favor of the Senate. The Republican majority in that body dealt with the legislative problems presented to them in a particult can statesmanike manner. While the action of the House has been characterized throughout by rank demagogy and reckless disregard of the Nation's interest, the Senate has acted as a barrier to much vicious and dangerous legislation, and has succeeded in several instances in forcing the unwilling Democracy of the House into at least a partial performance of its legislative duty.

The passage of the Stewart Free Sitzer hill cannot be servibed to the anwilling Democracy of the House into at least a partial performance of its legislative duty.

The passage of the Stewart Free Silver bill cannot be ascribed to the Republican majority in the Senate. The Stewart bill was plassed by Democratic votes. More than three-fourths of the Democratic Senators supported it. More than two-thirds of the Republican Senators opposed it. Democratic organs which attempt to throw the responsibility for the passage of this measure upon the Republicans deliberately prevaricate. The record shows that only fourteen out of forty-siz Republican Senators, paired and voting, were for the Stewart bill.

In the defense of the American Navy from the mean and cowardly attacks of the Holman Democrats the Republicans of the Senate performed a service of the Stewart value to the country. To their resolute stand in behalf of the Navy is due the additional armored battleship which Secretary Tracty proposes to make the most the standard of the Senate will be to provided for the torpedo boats and gunboats which is acked for; but it wested from the niggardly and unparticite House two great warships that will constitute an immensely important addition to our naval strength. Republican Senators originated the measure which added the magnificent ocean racers City of Paris and City of New York to the American marine, and provided for the construction by the Imma Company of two equally valuable vessels in American shippards. The Senate also passed and sent to the House the bill significant of Paris and City and the Pacific Mall steamship dimitting the Pacific Mall steamship.

carried its point against the obstinate resistance of the House. It demanded that the consular service of the United States abroad should be maintained in an efficient condition; and it compuled the Democrats of the House to abandon the barbarous and un-American provisions of the Geary bill in regard to the exclusion of the Chinese, and to adopt an exclusion measure more in conformity with justice and humanity. In the difficult and complicated negotiations with Gerat Britain in reference to Behring Sea and all diplomatic differences with other Nations, the Seante has loyally sustained the administration and the nonr of the United States. Its sensible action in voting to appropriate $3,000,000 to insure the success of the Nation's great exposition at Chicago was directly opposed to the stingy and shuffling course of the Democrats of the House. The exhaustive and impartial investigation by the Senate Finance Committee of the course of wages and prices since the course of wages and prices since the course of wages and prices since the enumeration of a great mass of highly valuable data regarding a subject which is of vital importance to every American citizen. Republican scan well afford to appeal to the country upon the record of the Senate as opposed to that of the House. The Republican Senate has again demonstrated the fact that the Republican party, unlike the blundering Democracy, knows how to govern.

Mr. CLEVELAND, in his calamity speech at the "notification" meeting, said that the farmer is "listening to a delusive story that fills his mind with visions of advantage, while his pocket is robbed by the stealthy hand of high Protection." Now comes the Senate report showing that priese of agricultural products have risen, on the average, 18.67 per cent. since the McKinley law was enacted. No wonder the farmer 'don't understand."
